

Benjamin E. Sapp, M.A.

Director, Mazza Museum; Instructor of Education, The University of Findlay

Benjamin Sapp is the director of the Mazza Museum at The University of Findlay.

His vision has been taking the wonderful foundation that has been set before him and expanding it through growth in educational programs and the collection of art.

Sapp has devoted his entire career to the Mazza Museum and teaching at The University of Findlay since graduating from The University of Findlay in 1993. During this time he served as deputy director and director of the Mazza Museum as well as being an instructor of education for The University of Findlay.

Sapp earned both his undergraduate and graduate degrees from The University of Findlay. Sapp has received many honors for his accomplishments, including The University of Findlay Alumni Association Old Main Award, Business Education Network Outstanding Educator Award and the Founders' Academic Excellence Award for Faculty.

Sapp has given more than 100 lectures across the United States on children's literature and how the Mazza Museum serves as a resource in the world of this genre.